ChiPortal is the major on-line source for information and communication between all professionals involved with the Israeli semiconductor industry. ChiPortal was founded by TapeOut Magazine - the most popular magazine in the Israeli semiconductor industry and is serving engineers, technical experts, senior executives, vendors, consultants, subcontractors, and investors.

ChiPortal mission is to provide a centralized platform for communication and interaction between industry people on both technology and business issues in order to help them make the most informed business, technology and product decisions.

ChiPortal is using the latest tools in web design including audio & video technologies to provide its users with the best browsing experience.

Chiportal includes extensive coverage of local and global news, articles, industry events, new products announcements, video interviews, articles (including talkbacks), professional forums, vendors index, career section, technical courses, market research information, demos of technical tools and other useful information. Among the topics covered by Chiportal are Semiconductor outlook, chip design, fabrication, testing & Assembly, design IPs, embedded systems, components, PCBs, green technologies, nano technologies, and military systems.

Chiportal is based on TapeOut magazine editorial team and benefits from its close relations with leading industry authorities among them are the Technion – Israel's leading institute of technology, GSA (Global Semiconductor Alliance) and Garry Smith, the number one analyst of the semiconductor industry.
